MEN CAUGHT IN TUNNEL FLOOD BARELY ESCAPE

Blowout in Battery Tube Will Entail Months of Delay.

Dived to Escape Death.

Three hundred feet distant from them ras their only means of escape. It has the air look at that point, but the ntervening distance being interlaced with a close webbing of fixed timbers, man's body through which to pass, rendered slim the chances of the men reaching the lock.

These obstructions obliged the fice ng men to pass through singly, and n several instances the only openings were close to the bottom of the tube. recessitating the fugitives crawling

"Mike" Proves a Hero.

The air pressure was increased in the hope of keeping back the water, without the men above knew must inevitably pour toto the tunnel, mufficiently long man to enable the work of resous to proceed. The lock attendent stationed at the point for which McGuire and his men were making desperately through the rapidly rising water proved the real here of the occasion. He is known senly by the name of "Mike."
Realising quickly the danger of the men upon whom he was required alone watch out, he clowed the upper chamber of the airlock against the increased pressure and opened the look entering into the tube in which the "blowout" had taken place. He finshed his lantern and saw the whirling water and then the voice of McGuire was

"Mike," he shouted as he and his men struggled on, "keep that look open or we will be a bunch of dead ones. Keep s open-the water is up to our neckal All Escaped in Time.

"Th keep it open until every one of you are luside," yelled "Mike," as he placed a plank in readiness for the assistance of the men. He grabbed each by the hand, pulling him into the look, until all twelve were inside. Then he applies the air, closing the doors against the rising tide.

Two minutes later the tube, which is fifteen feet in diameter, was flooded to the roof.

Deputy Chief Engineer Craven, of the Board of Rapid Transit Commis-sioners, made an investigation to-day. The trouble was tuat the heading was just being pushed out of a strata of solid rock into soft mud. There is always danger in that. I am not prepared to speak now of the sinking o the tube. The definite condition of it cannot be determined until the water is pumped out. And, of course, the water cannot be pumped out until the break in the mud is filled in."
